COMPREHENSIVE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT STRATEGY

Ms. Danielle Story gave a presentation on the Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy (CEDS). The CEDS document is federally required by the U.S. Economic Development Administration (EDA) because the KIPDA region is a designated economic development district. KIPDA obtained information by sending out surveys to individuals involved in KIPDA's various planning councils. The council members ranked priorities and identified issues within the region.

The CEDS document provides a summary background of the economic conditions of the region. The document also contains a S.W.O.T. Analysis which identifies the strengths, weaknesses, opportunities, and threats in the region. A Strategic Direction Action Plan and an evaluation framework are in the CEDS document as well.

The summary background of the economic conditions of the region breaks down the environment, economy, culture, etc. of the region. It also highlights the workforce information and educational opportunities within the region.

Some of the strengths identified in the S.W.O.T. Analysis were the schools, location, cost of living, and bourbon. Some identified weaknesses in the region are affordable housing, access to mass transit, sprawl, and an unskilled workforce. Regional opportunities included tourism, workforce development, and agriculture. Threats identified in the region were such things as aging infrastructure, affordable housing, and decrease in funding opportunities. Each threat was then ranked by priority. The strategies that are thought to be most beneficial to the economic development in the region were also identified.

The document also ranks the capital improvement priorities for the region. The top three priorities identified were road improvements, water and sewer, and public housing. The snapshot portion provides information for the region such as population numbers, housing data, economic data, and educational opportunities. The largest industries in the region are listed and the percent change in jobs in the region from 2013 to 2018 is included. Commute time and how many people are employed in the region as a whole are also included. This information is broken down for each county as well.

It was required that the CEDS document contain the economic distress criteria for the region and highlighted by county. This data was provided through Stats America. According to the Stats America labor statistics data, Trimble County is considered the most economically distressed county in the region, followed by Henry County. This information will be maintained in the document going forward. Economic resiliency information is also included in the document and will be expanded upon this year.

The survey respondents identified strategic target sectors that they thought would add value to the community that should be focused on for economic development. From all the information received an action plan will be put together with five overall goals including economic development, workforce, transportation, water and wastewater infrastructure, and quality of life.
